BATTLE OF THE QUEENS HITS THE PERTH STAGE

MARY STUART

Adapted by Kate Mulvany, after Friedrich Schiller

In association with Fremantle Theatre Company

'In this richly satisfying production . . . two women at times reluctantly battle out this deadly game of thrones.'* — Sydney Morning Herald

The landmark theatrical event Mary Stuart will bring to magnificent life one of history's great rivalries – Elizabeth I's battle royale with Mary, Queen of Scots.

Acclaimed WA playwright Kate Mulvany has adapted Friedrich Schiller's epic tale into a sumptuous costume drama with an outstanding WA cast led by the colossal acting talents of Kate Walsh (Elizabeth) and Caroline Brazier (Mary).

The commanding production, in association with Fremantle Theatre Company, is directed by Mel Cantwell, whose production Whale Fall was a highlight of the 2021 Perth Festival. Expect fierce performances from the large cast, opulent period-inspired costumes and ingenious design to reveal both the grandeur and danger of Elizabethan England.

Mary Stuart unfolds with the Scottish uprising and the capture of Mary as she tries to flee the country. Elizabeth feels threatened – Mary is younger, more beloved, and with her own claim to the throne. Do they have more in common than they realise? The question now is whether Elizabeth will release Mary – or execute her.

With plot twists, witty dialogue and political intrigue, Mary Stuart transcends its 16th century origins to become the story of two smart, strong women scheming and struggling to hold on to power, determined to survive in a world dominated by double-crossing men.

Kate Walsh (The Other Place, Grey's Anatomy) plays Elizabeth, and Caroline Brazier (Dinner, ABC's Rake) reprises her role as Mary from the 2019 original Sydney Theatre Company production. These are two flawed and fascinating women locked in a monumental feud in which the endgame is to kill or be killed.

Geraldton-born playwright, screenwriter and actor Kate Mulvany showcases her work at home in this 13-show run in the Heath Ledger Theatre.

Director Mel Cantwell is thrilled to be bringing the iconic story to life. 'Kate Mulvany's beautiful play is bold, empathic and powerful. Written with fierce wit and intelligence, it achieves that most remarkable of things: bringing history to the stage in a living, breathing contemporary form. Mary Stuart is striking in its relevance and resonance with today's world.'

Perth Festival Artistic Director Iain Grandage said Mulvany's utterly compelling version of Schiller's male-dominated play focuses on the relationship between the two queens by imagining an in-person meeting between the two. 'It is a beautiful reinvention and distillation of the original play,' he said. 'It is a thrill for the Festival to be able to celebrate three extraordinary women, each with a strong connection to Western Australia, in this centrepiece theatrical tour-de-force.'

This adaptation of Mary Stuart was commissioned by the Sydney Theatre Company and was first produced at the Roslyn Packer Theatre in February 2019.
